TARIFF BILL TO WILSON TONIGHT

Party Leaders Believe Quick Action Will Bring Measure to Executive

Washington, Oct. 2.—The Democratic tariff revision bill probably will be in the hands of President Wilson for his signature tomorrow night. The session, at the end of a listless debate, passed the conference report at 8:50 o'clock tonight by a vote of 36 to 17, only four more than the necessary quorum of the senate.

Immediately after the passing of the conference report made by Senator Simmons of the finance committee, the senate re-enacted the Smith-Lever compromise cotton future amendment, passed by the house Tuesday and then receded from its own amendment, known as the Glass cotton futures, tax plan. Both of these motions were carried without roll call and their effect is to leave the cotton future question out of the tariff bill so far as the senate is concerned.

The bill will be returned to the house leaders today, the question was taken up as to whether the bill might not go directly from the senate to the president. While many parliamentarians held that this course would be legal, Chairman Underwood and speaker Clark, decided the house should take formal action tomorrow to re-recede from its cotton futures tax amendment. Such action will eliminate the subject from the bill and the completed measure can go to President Wilson at once.

BRAD'S BIT O' VERSE

BY J. C. BRADSHAW

AS THEY CAVORT

When fate treats me rudely and prospects are glum, folks cheer me up, saying, "Take things as they come." It's dandy advice; but the things I most want come near enough to me to tempt and to taunt, come beckoning toward me all brilliant and gay, and when I would take them they vanish away. So why in my ears maxims old do they drum? And why do folks mock me, "Take things as they come?" Then haply, if some things I get in my grasp and think to retain them with strong, eager clasp, how deep is the anguish and poignant the woe, how painful to give them all up as they go. "Take things as they come." It is easy to do if things that you long for come prancing to you; but when get stung forty times in a day, it's hard to look pleasant and keep up the fray. The folks that have all things their hearts can desire are free with advice to a man in the mire; but here's the best way—keep a-doing your best, and give all the mouldy old maxims a rest.

It seems that the Board of Education of Monett object to the boys and girls spooning around the school grounds at night, so they got the city to put up several electric lights around the grounds. The Board forgot that they were young and giddy once.—Peirce City Leader.
